

We Love This Web Site

I've never met her, but I bet Jennifer Ruf, publisher of 360mag.com loves a good off-color joke.

The online magazine is geared toward wheelchair users, and the March 24 issue covers an art exhibit featuring photos of naked disabled people, including a man with CP who may or may not be about to receive oral sex (the show got rave reviews in London, but it's considered quite controversial in Australia); a news item wishing Viagra a happy sixth birthday; and a great story titled, "We're Here, We're Queer, We're Crips," which zeros in on gay men who use wheelchairs—not a highly visible part of the disability community.

The first rule for people who want to submit a personal essay is, "Surprise us. Anything goes." It ought to be 360's motto.
